LONDON SOCIETY. - In compliance with the unanimous request of his audience at the conclusion of his lecture on Tuesday evening last, William Jackson Armstrong, the Washington lecturer, has consented to give his great lecture on London society on Saturday evening in the University chapel. This lecture was first given in London before an audience composed of members of parliament and the distinguished persons belonging to the society which he describes, and was there pronounced to be the most vivid description of London fashionsbie and literary society which had ever been
